Frontiers of Flight Museum Receives $10,000 Gift for its Jan Collmer Education Fund from Aftermarket Services and BBA Aviation's Charitable Giving Program

DALLAS (August 8, 2015) – Today, Dallas Airmotive, a BBA Aviation company, announced that it has provided a grant of $10,000 in support of the Frontiers of Flight Museum's Jan Collmer Education Fund. The will contribution will be used to facilitate education programs and scholarships for the Museum's Aviation & Space Camp summer programs for grades 1 through 12, outreach programs and special education initiatives. The Fund's goal is to reach 10,000 children each year. Visit www.flightmuseum.com.

Dallas Airmotive has been supporting the Frontiers of Flight Museum since it opened at its current location – 6911 Lemmon Avenue, Dallas, Texas -- in 2004. Employees from the company president on down have served as volunteers on committees and boards and helped in raising funds, sponsoring events and recruiting members for the organization.

Frontiers of Flight Museum is an affiliate of the Smithsonian Institution and is dedicated to advancing public awareness of aviation and the role it plays in the Dallas Fort Worth community, preserving historical records of aviation, and sponsoring youth oriented education programs designed to apply science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) principles.

In 2010, BBA Aviation launched its Charitable Giving Programme, a Group-wide initiative. The program complements the many existing charitable giving and community involvement programs that are supported throughout BBA Aviation's operating companies.

The aim of the program is to bring the company's mission and values to life by making a real and sustainable difference to the industries in which it operates and a positive and lasting influence on the North Texas area and other communities it serves.
